

Forget the Yellow Brick Road

Book Launch

Thursday 19th November, 2009

Forget the Yellow Brick Road, by author, consultant, and speaker; Liz Green, was officially launched at Kit & Kaboodle on Thursday evening 19th November, 2009.

Ditching the conventional, Liz launched her own book (in her words “I launched my own career, so who better to launch my own book!”) , and during her speech shared her journey on and off the yellow brick road. She also illustrated how important it is to recognise that success is individual and evolving.

With over 120 guests present and plenty of good food and wine, it was a great opportunity to network.

Personally signed copies of the book walked out the door, with copies now available on Amazon, from selected bookstores and directly through Successium.

Forget the Yellow Brick Road
by Liz Green

120 guests at Kit & Kaboodle,
Kings Cross.

The food, drinks and service were fabulous.

Liz shared her career story - off the yellow brick road.

Liz even bought a new pen to sign copies of her book for her guests.

Bottles of Success were handed out with the gift bags.

Belinda, a childhood friend of Liz's, talked about the value of peer support in the achievement of success.

Family, friends, Successium clients and industry representatives attended the launch.

It was a great night for socialising and networking.

The gift bags doubled as a spare pair of high heel shoes for some!

Carolyn McIntyre (right) of UNSW was just one of the HR and L&D professionals on the guest list.

Some of the Successium team... Liz Green, Nyrissa Jones and Naomi Carter.
